Suit For Ten Thousand Dollars Damages.

John A. Mitchell, the dentist, has brought suit against Charles H. White, of the firm of White & Ort, for ten thousand dollars damages. This suit grows out of the difficulty that occurred between these gentlemen, on Market street some time in the early part of April. The plaintiff, Mitchell claims that defendant White, maliciously assaulted him while he was peaceably passing along said street, and stabbed and wounded him, once in the left side of his throat near the jugular vein, and once in the shoulder and that by reason of the loss of blood, he fainted and was confined to his bed for great length of time, and was put to much expense in securing medical treatment. The plaintiff also claims that by reason of aforesaid wounding he was unable to provide for his large family and that he was also unable to attend to his business as a practicing dentist. He says he has been damaged in the sum of $10,000, and asks judgment for that amount and his costs and all proper relief. Geo. R. Gift and A. A. Wadsworth are his attorneys.

NEWS BREVITIES.

Oscar Wilde's agent purchased three sleeping-car tickets from Atlanta to Savannah, and when three berths were occupied one of the occupants was a negro, Wilde's valet. Official remonstrance was made by the Pullman agent that it was against the Company's rule for negroes to have sleeping-car berths. Wilde insisted that the darkey should ride with him, and said that he had done so all over the South without remonstrance, and that he should stay where he was. He was then informed that if a negro was seen to be riding in the sleeping car the people at the next station would gut the car. Upon this Wilde receded, and the negro went to a common car.
